1 Supplementary file 1: Summary of key concepts in policies addressing primary health 2 care support for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women experiencing violence 3 4 1. Family Violence 5 6 The National Plan defines family violence as: 7 8 A broader term that refers to violence between family members, as well as violence 9 between intimate partners...the term 'family violence' is the most widely used term to identify the experiences of Indigenous people, because it includes the broad range of 10 11 marital and kinship relationships in which violence may occur.¹ 12 It states family violence involves the same behaviours as domestic violence, which is defined 13 14 as: 15 16 An ongoing pattern of behaviour aimed at controlled a partner through fear... in most 17 cases, the violent behaviour is part of a range of tactics to exercise power and control over women and their children, and can be both criminal and non-criminal. Domestic 18 violence includes physical, sexual, emotional and psychological abuse.¹ 19 20 21 The National Plan explains best practice involves providing incentives and support payments 22 for nurses and Aboriginal Family Health Workers in regional and rural areas to complete domestic violence training.¹ 23 24 Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa defines 'domestic and family violence' as a 'crime' that is: 25

27	'usually directed at an intimate partner – spouse, girlfriend, ex-partner, child. Can
28	involve sexual, physical, emotional, or economic violence, threats of violence,
29	behaviour that causes fear.'2
30
31	Child neglect, abuse, sexual abuse is further defined as 'part of continuing and growing
32	pattern of behaviour that may escalate – could go from emotional to physical violence'. ²
33
34	Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa has a specific section (p.324-326) that states best clinical practice
35	when domestic and family violence is suspected. ² It also outlines the following circumstances
36	that practitioners must consider domestic and family violence suspicious:
37
38	'injury doesn't match story of how it happened; injuries covered by clothing —
39	breasts, abdomen, chest, unusual or hidden places on body; injuries to abdomen or
40	private parts (genitals), injuries when pregnant; treating women with gynaecological
41	or anxiety problems; person repeatedly comes to clinic with injuries or vague
42	symptoms; delay in seeking medical attention, doesn't want to talk about what
43	happened; or if concerned about a child.'2
44
45	The Third Action Plan defines family violence as:
46
47	a broader term that generally extends to violence between family members as well as
48	violence between intimate partners (it) is the preferred term to identify violence
49	experienced by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, where violence can
50	occur between people from a range of marital and kinship relationships. ³

51
52	The National Plan ¹ and Third Action Plan ³ do not cover all typologies of violence.
53
54	The White Book ⁴ defines 'Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander violence' as per the
55	definition in the Victorian Indigenous Family Violence Task Force Report:
56
57	a range of physical, emotional, sexual, social, spiritual, cultural, psychological and
58	economic abuses, one-on-one fighting, self-harm, injury and suicide that occur within
59	families, intimate relationships, extended families, kinship networks and
60	communities. ^{4,5}
61
62	The NSW AFHW Operational Guidelines ⁶ defines family violence as per the Aboriginal
63	Child Sexual Assault Taskforce's definition:
64
65	Family violence describes all forms of violence (including physical, emotional,
66	sexual, sociological, economic and spiritual) in intimate, family and other
67	relationships of mutual obligation and support. ⁷
68
69	The NSW AFHW Operational Guidelines additionally states:
70
71	Family violence encapsulates the extended nature of Aboriginal families and takes
72	account of the diversity and complexity of kinship ties in Aboriginal communities. It
73	recognises that Aboriginal family violence impacts on a wide range of kin and
74	community members. ⁶
75

The WA Reference Manual⁸ defines family violence with reference to the WA State 76 77 Government Strategic Plan for Family and Domestic Violence 2009-2013: 78 79 Family and domestic violence is usually not an isolated event but is a pattern of ongoing, repetitive and purposeful use of physical, emotional, social, financial and/or 80 81 sexual abuse used to intimidate or instil fear. Such behaviour enables the one person to control and have power over the other person in an 'intimate' or family 82 83 relationship. It is considered to be behaviour which results in physical, sexual and/or 84 psychological damage, forced social isolation, economic deprivation or behaviour which causes a person to live in fear.8 85 86 87 2. Violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women 88 89 The National Plan defines Violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls by the higher prevalence of hospitalisation as a result of family violence¹ and as per the 90 United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women. ⁹ The concept is 91 embedded. Best practice is stated as fostering the leadership of Aboriginal and Torres Strait 92 93 Islander women within communities and broader Australian society, and improving their 94 access to appropriate services.¹ 95 Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa defines Violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander 96 97 women and children as including domestic and family violence (see section 1.1 for definition and best practice).²

The Third Action Plan defines violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women as more prevalent and complex than violence against non-Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women.³ It distinguishes violence against all women as more severe and part of an ongoing pattern of intimidation and control, compared to violence against men.³ The concept is embedded.³ The White Book defines the predominant proportion of people who experience violence as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women when compared to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander men and children.⁴ The concept is embedded.⁴ The WA Reference Manual defines family and domestic violence as a gendered crime of violence against women when it is between men and women.⁸ The concept is embedded.⁸ The policies that define the specific context of violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women beyond its disproportionate prevalence are discussed below. 3. Social Determinants of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health and Wellbeing The National Plan defines family violence experienced by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women as unique due to the significant disadvantage experienced by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples creating complex issues and requiring extra effort to reduce violence. Best practice is explained as fostering the leadership of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women; improving economic status; funding initiatives to close the gap in housing, health, early childhood, economic participation and remote service delivery; and improving access to appropriate services for women and their children.¹

The Third Action Plan refers to the intersecting factors influencing violence. It states the need for an 'Indigenous-specific' policy resource; further research on the social impacts of violence; support for female leadership, education and workforce participation; and wraparound, case-managed support for families.³

The White Book acknowledges family violence against Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women is influenced by colonisation policies and practices, dispossession and cultural dislocation, dislocation of families through removal, marginalisation as a minority, unemployment, welfare dependency, addictions, health and mental health issues, low self-esteem and a sense of powerlessness.⁴ It does explain the factors or the role of GPs in addressing them.⁴

The NSW AFHW Operational Guidelines refers to the core role of AFHW including family support focused activities, such as initial crisis support, advocacy and referral to other services.⁶ Further explanation of those core roles is embedded throughout the policy, including an emphasis on the role of the AFHW as a liaison with government and non-government agencies.⁶

The WA Reference Manual advises practitioners to consider the 'big picture' when working with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander clients and that the violence may be part of an 'underlying bigger problem'. The policy also advises practitioners to consider language barriers and potential fears or doubts and lack of knowledge or understanding of legal services and the police. The WA Guideline includes Aboriginal Medical Services as a referral agency on the 'FDV Assessment Outcome Recording' Form.

Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa refers to the importance of family support and connection, and cultural practices in clinical appointments.² Additionally, in the setting where domestic and family violence is suspected, ensuring the patient has adequate housing is emphasised.²

4. Cultural Safety

In the WA Reference Manual cultural safety is a role of WA health professionals. It is described as taking into account and not diminishing or threatening the differences, cultural rights, expectations or practices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and families and reflecting on the historical and personal context. Best practice is explained as understanding the context of 'racism, dispossession, marginalisation, poverty and separation of children from their parents', establishing a long term involvement with the patient to build trust, understanding 'Aboriginal families view their family structure and relationships differently to the mainstream community' and 'providing same-sex staff to assess and treat the client'. 8

Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa defines cultural safety as a health care environment that is culturally safe and secure with practitioners that are culturally aware and competent. Best practice is referred to as learning about the local culture, being respectful.² Best practice for considering cultural beliefs, effective communication and methods of questioning patients is explained in detail and practitioners are given instructions and examples (pg.3).²

The National Plan argues cultural competence of mainstream and specialist services is important for improving access for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women.¹ The onus

175	for change is on the health service provider, 10 however there is no explanation of what
176	cultural competency includes.
177
178	The NSW AFHW Operational Guidelines does not mention cultural safety in the context of
179	PHC for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women experiencing violence. ⁶ Within the first
180	month of employment AFHWs are required learn how 'they meet the needs of Aboriginal
181	communities in a culturally appropriate manner'.6 The onus is on the AFHW to provide
182	culturally appropriate care 10 but it is not defined.
183
184	A key action in the Third Action Plan is to establish culturally appropriate support for
185	Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women. ³ The importance of culturally appropriate
186	policy, programs and primary prevention activities is mentioned in the Aboriginal and Torres
187	Strait Islander women and their children priority area. ³ The policy does not indicate who the
188	onus for change is on or define culturally appropriate support, policy, programs or activities.
189
190	5. Holistic Health
191
192	The Third Action Plan mentioned holistic health in the context of establishing improved
193	community-driven, trauma-informed supports to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander
194	women and their children who have experienced violence. ³
195
196	The NSW AFHW Operational Guidelines defined holistic health as a:
197
198	perspective which acknowledges that solutions to family violence are to be found in
199	local communities. They (AFHW) recognise the historical, cultural, legal, social,

200	political and personal power relations affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander
201	communities. ⁶
202
203	The WA Reference Manual defined a whole-of-life view of health in the 'key points to
204	remember when working with Aboriginal people' as a:
205
206	social, emotional and cultural wellbeing of not just the individual but the whole
207	community and includes the cyclical nature of life-death-life.8
208
209	Both definitions draw from the definition of holistic health in the NAHS.
210
211	Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa mentions concepts relating to holistic health throughout the
212	guidelines, in particular in the sections 'cultural safety tips' (p.3) and 'looking after women's
213	health' (p.6). ²
214
215	6. Trauma
216
217	The National Plan mentions the need to heal trauma in order to build community capacity at
218	the local level. The Third Action Plan recognises the impacts of past trauma resulting from
219	colonisation and social disadvantage. ³ The WA Reference Manual highlights the importance
220	of recognising trauma and loss. ⁸ Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa refers to trauma associated with
221	women's health issues, such as sexual assault, and delineates between primary, life
222	threatening, trauma and secondary trauma. ²
223
224	7. Patient Centred Care

The WA Reference Manual referred to patient centred care as client centred under the role of WA Health.⁸ The practice points for 'Aboriginal Peoples and Families' include, taking into account cultural rights, expectations or practices, developing trust and working in partnership with clients, considering the client's preferences, being flexible in service delivery, offering a range of services and respecting the client's choice.⁸ While client centred care is not defined, the core aspects of this concept are embedded. The basis of Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa is patient centred care as it is designed specifically for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women in the health care setting.²

8. Trauma and Violence Informed Care (TVIC)

A key action in the Third Action Plan is to establish trauma-informed support for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women who have experienced violence.³ There is no definition of TVIC. Of the five best practice examples, two reflect TVIC: develop wraparound, casemanaged support and improve service delivery to provide intensive, holistic, culturally sensitive responses.³ The guidelines in Minymaku Kutju Tjukurpa emphasise the need for safe and understanding environments, which is informed by a TVIC approach.²
